Memorandum:

One of the recommendations from the Cariboo Chilcotin 2017 Wildfires Report and a subsequent business plan goal for the Communications Department was to create a Crisis Communications Plan for the Cariboo Regional District. Tim Conrad of Butterfly Effect Communications was contracted to develop the plan in coordination with CRD staff.

The purpose of the Crisis Communications Plan is to provide a helpful, hands-on guide for CRD staff to use in a crisis or emergency, when communicating with both internal and external audiences.

Often the words crisis, emergency and disaster are used interchangeably; however, a crisis may only impact reputation, where an emergency or disaster likely impact life safety or property. The incident, length of the incident and size of the incident guides the definition.

This plan will guide the CRD's response to all crises, emergencies or disasters, whether an Emergency Operations Centre is activated or not. This could range from minor crises (such as a localized utility outage, an angry resident at a CRD office or a reputational crisis) to medium crises (such as a Boil Water Notice or minor flooding) to major crises (like a natural disaster with a full Emergency Operations Centre activation).

Following Board review and support of the plan, training will be conducted with staff to help identify a crisis and implement the crisis response process. Also, short reference guides will be developed for staff based on their involvement in the crisis response.

The Crisis Communications Plan will always be a living document with continual updates, along with additional guides, flowcharts and tools, but the foundation of the plan is presented for the Committee's review and endorsement.
