OVERDOSE PREVENTION & RESPONSE

Clarification: There is no shortage of injectable naloxone for Take Home Naloxone Kits

In a recent media coverage the premier announced that there was a provincial shortage of naloxone. This communication was referring to intranasal naloxone for police and RCMP members. There currently is no shortage of injectable naloxone for the Take Home Naloxone program.

BCCDC continues to closely monitor their naloxone inventory, and currently have no supply issues. There may be delays in shipping due to increases in weekly order volume, but BCCDC will communicate any delays with distribution sites if they come up. BCCDC will also monitor for any urgent Naloxone requests and if a site is urgently needing any supplies they can contact naloxone@bccdc.ca

BC THN kits are available to those who are likely to witness and respond to an overdose. There are no supply issues with the Take Home Naloxone Program or Facility Overdose Response Box Programs. Use the site finder to locate a site near you:

YOUR HEALTH, A PRIORITY

Orange Shirt Day

Thursday, September 30 is the National Day for Truth and Reconciliation and was chosen to align with Orange Shirt Day, a time of collective remembrance during which we honour those who attended Residential Schools as well as their families and communities. It is also a time to demonstrate personal and organizational commitments to reconciliation. This day honours the lost children and Survivors of residential schools, their families and communities. Public commemoration of the tragic and painful history and ongoing impacts of residential schools is a vital component of the reconciliation process.

For more information about Orange Shirt Day, please visit orangeshirtday.org, and read the articles Shelby Petersen (Lead, Knowledge Translation and Community Engagement with Indigenous Health) has written. For more information about the National Day for Truth and Reconciliation, please continue reading this article.

Preferred proponent chosen for new Dawson Creek hospital

People in Dawson Creek and area are one step closer to a new hospital now that a preferred proponent has been selected for the design phase.

“The selection of the team that will design the new hospital means another important milestone has been reached for people in the region,” said Adrian Dix, Minister of Health. “The new and bigger facility will deliver public health-care services to people in the South Peace for decades to come.”

As a result of the evaluation process, in co-ordination with Northern Health and Infrastructure BC, Clark Builders-Turner-HDR Architecture was selected.
